REDWOOD MAY BE BIG AIR PORT

Efforts are now being made to locate the proposed municipal airport at Redwood City. The location of the proposed airport has been a moot question in San Francisco since the first consideration of the project. It is now practically decided that the airport should be located south of San Francisco. Three situations were considered within the limits of San Francisco. The first was abandoned because of the expense involved in the acquisition of the land. The second was abandoned because of the expense involved in the acquisition of the land. The third was abandoned because of the expense involved in the acquisition of the land.

Police Officer Albert D. Coturri of San Bruno died last Tuesday night as the result of being struck earlier in the day by a car driven E. J. Wickman of Wilmington, Los Angeles county. Coturri was called to the scene of a wreck on the highway near Baden Tuesday morning before daylight and was assisting in clearing the highway when he heard the roar of a rapidly approaching machine. He stepped to the middle of the highway and signaled with a flashlight for the machine to stop to avoid running into the wrecked car or onto the glass with which the highway was strewn.

The accident occurred as two cars, one driven by Baccalera and the other by Joe Ferrando, were proceeding towards Redwood City from the home of a friend in the hills back of town. In Baccalera's car were Carlo Ferrando, Giuseppe, Giovanni Baccalera, Joe Lanza and Edward Bozzi.

LATEST WOODSIDE NEWS

Almost week by week we are called upon to report some new destruction by fire. This time it is the property of Arthur Hooper. At 4:45 on Wednesday afternoon a huge column of black smoke showing above the trees announced to the residents of this valley that once more we were to pay the penalty for our lack of provision for fighting fire. The whole population of Woodside gathers quickly in the face of the common danger and fights gallantly and successfully to prevent the spread of the flames, but in the absence of water or chemicals, the building in which a fire once starts is doomed.

Running Deer With Spot Light

Three men were arrested Monday by Game Warden Jack Burk and M. S. Clark on the Folger ranch at Woodside for hunting deer after dark with a spotlight and for hunting deer out of season. The men under arrest were E. J. Bonavanti, Conrad Miller and H. J. Williamson, all of Woodside.

BIG RADIO EXPOSITION IN SAN FRANCISCO NEXT MONTH

Pans for the second annual Pacific Radio Exposition, to be held in the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco, August 16 to 21, inclusive, are rapidly nearing completion and the show has assumed the status of an assured success, according to A. S. Lindstrom, chairman of the executive committee in charge. Lindstrom stated that there will be approximately 150 exhibits, representing practically every type of radio receiving set as well as various accessories such as loudspeakers, batteries, etc. Booth structures are practically complete and an elaborate decorative scheme has been worked out.

BIG SALE ON TODAY

L. E. Smith, who recently staged one of the most successful sales ever held in Redwood City for the Economy Store, has undertaken to duplicate his performance for the entire stock of the store is to be sold out at wonderfully reduced prices, as can be seen from a study of their ad appearing on another page of this paper. At the time of his first sale here, crowds thronged the sidewalks for hours waiting for the store to open and even greater numbers were at the opening of the sale yesterday. Those who wish a pick of the stock are advised to come early, not to avoid the rush, but to be in the beginning of it.

MAY LOCATE FACTORY HERE

It is reported this week that representatives of a large tire manufacturing concern of the East is looking for a suitable location for a factory in close proximity to San Francisco. The representatives of this company investigated the possibilities here and offered to purchase one of the local manufacturing plants for the purpose of starting manufacturing here immediately. The plant they tried to buy was not for sale, however, and they are still looking for a suitable place. They may locate in some other part of Redwood City and bid a plant.

The accident occurred on the highway near the Belmont pumping station and was caused by a car driven by H. E. Maylon of San Mateo who attempted to pass a car ahead and ran headlong into the car in which the Redwood City people were riding, which was driven by Lawrence Cirner. It is reported that the occupants of Maylon's car were uninjured by the accident, although both cars were badly wrecked.

THREE MEN IN PROHIBITION TRAP

Dry agents this week arrested three residents of Menlo Park and seized a quantity as evidence to be used against them in San Francisco. The men arrested are J. E. Lennox, C. Angelo and Angelo Simoni. The two latter were held in San Francisco, the former was brought to the jail here and released on producing $1000 cash bail. The three men were to be tried in the federal court yesterday afternoon.

SAVED-OFF SHOT GUNS FOR FEDERAL OFFICERS

According to an announcement made this week by Prohibition Director Samuel Rutter of San Francisco, all prohibition officials in his district will be armed with saved-off shot guns for protection from the bootleggers and hucksters of the coast-side of this and adjoining counties. There have been several encounters between prohibition forces and landing parties bringing liquor into the country from rum-running vessels off the coast, and in all cases there have been shots exchanged. In announcing this order to his agents Rutter warned them against unnecessary shooting and said there had been too much blood shed already. The dry agents were exposed to great danger, however, he said, and needed deadly weapons for their own protection as well as the enforcement of the law.

A NATIONAL LIABILITY

It has been said that in a democracy such as ours, that the intelligence of the nation in international affairs will depend upon the intelligence of the individual voters who make up the state. How important it is then that the degree of intelligence of the average voter be raised. In this connection the question of illiteracy becomes a national problem, and the education of the people a national duty. Reliable statistics show that in spite of our much vaunted school system that the United States ranks eleventh in line in illiteracy, ten nations having a more literate population than we. The order of nations in this regard is as follows:

Germany, .2 per cent illiteracy; Denmark, .2 per cent illiteracy; Switzerland, .5 per cent illiteracy; Netherlands, .6 per cent illiteracy; Finland, .9 per cent illiteracy; Norway, 1.0 per cent illiteracy; Sweden, 1.0 per cent illiteracy; Scotland, 1.6 per cent illiteracy; England and Wales, 1.8 per cent illiteracy; France, 4.9 per cent illiteracy; United States 6.0 per cent illiteracy.

To be sure much of this illiteracy is caused by a large proportion of emigrants from lands whose average of literacy is far below that of any of the nations named above, but this only emphasizes the need of a more highly developed system for educating the illiterate immigrant to this country. Even within our own country, there are sections where through lack of funds the educational system is sadly lacking. Children raised in such sections are under a great disadvantage as compared with children reared in more favored locations. It is up to the Federal government to remedy this condition. Only by Federal aid will the educational standards of the country be uniformly raised. The individual can aid in this by impressing upon his representatives in the national government the popular demand for the wiping out of this blot of ignorance upon the nation. Make America first.

BUILDERS OF ETERNITY

PHARAOH CHEOPS, in his pride, built out of the agony of two thousand slaves, a mighty pyramid in which he boasted that his bones should lie honored by generations until the stars should fade. The pyramid still stands, but the bones of him who built it are lost these many centuries in the shifting sands of Egypt.

Imperial Rome, on the valor of her legions, built an empire from the Pillars of Hercules to the wide plains of Parthia. Today her legions are memories, her eagles dust.

And such without exception is the story of all men who have built in greed and selfishness, self-seeking upon the toil and agony which is the lot of every common man.

On the other hand, there was in Athens a penniless stonemason named Socrates who, in a world of lies, dared to tell the truth. As a consequence, he was tried in the courts and executed as an enemy of the state.

There was another man in Syria who gave the world a great new thought—the idea that wealth, power, brilliance of intellect, material accomplishments, beauty, courage, pleasure, are all things of a day and that only justice rooted in understanding, which in turn is rooted in love, is immortal. He also was executed as an enemy of the state. He is known in history as Jesus Christ.

These two men are dead two thousand years. There is not one line of writing in existence penned by the hand of either. There is not known to exist a single object which either owned. Both were poor, despised and died as felons, one poisoned, the other crucified.

Yet of all men who have lived from the beginning of time until the present moment, there are no two names that are greater, each in its separate sphere, than those of Socrates, the Philosopher, and Christ, the Crucified.

Men build lastingly not through the power of money, not by the whirling wheels of industry, not through the strength of armies and of fleets, but in truth and love. Such building is eternal; more lasting than the rocks on which the continents are laid.

Man lives a few years, dies and is forgotten but his works, no matter how small they may be, leave a ripple upon the tide of humanity, the effects of which shall last as long as the race. Destiny is the result of what you and I are doing now.

NATIONAL DEFENSE DAY

SEPTEMBER 12 has been proclaimed "Defense Test Day," a day on which the defensive powers of the nation will be mobilized as though the country were suddenly plunged into war. Military and naval units will be mustered, industries tested as to their ability to serve the nation at a minutes warning, and the strength or weakness of each line of defense noted. The day will be devoted to patriotic demonstrations and a great celebration of the peace with which our country is now blessed. This day will not in any respect be militaristic. On the contrary it will be a great peace celebration when the great traditions of the country will be revived and strengthened in the minds of Americans. Defense, not aggression is the spirit of democracy. Peace and the willingness to fight for peace will be the spirit of "Defense Test Day."

MORE INTEREST NEEDED

IN an editorial last week we urged upon the citizen the necessity for registering for the coming election. It is now too late to register, and only those whose names are now in the books will be privileged to vote next month. We now want to emphasize the necessity for each registered voter to cast his ballot at that election. We showed last week that from 1896 to 1920 the average number of voters dwindled from 80 per cent to 50 per cent by gradual steps. One half of the people rule the nation. This can only proceed so far when the country will have fallen from a democracy to an oligarchy, ruled and governed by a few individuals. The voter who fails to vote is throwing away the privilege which our ancestors died to gain for us. In order that the will of the people may rule, it is necessary that that will be expressed. In Australia voting is compulsory. It should not need to be so here, but if necessary to arouse the citizen to his duty to himself and to his country, we would favor the same order of things that Australia has adopted.

DEVELOPING RADIO CONVENIENCES

ON commenting on the rapid development of radio and prospective improvements for benefit of radio uses, David Sarnoff, vice-president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, says that one of the greatest conveniences that will be given the public is a "Current Supply Device," operated from the regular house lighting circuit. This will eliminate the trouble of storage and dry batteries, where ordinary lighting service is available. Mr. Sarnoff says the "Current Supply Device" would make the installation and use of the radio receiver as simple a convenience as the electric lamp or vacuum cleaner, for it would merely be necessary to plug the usual form of extension cord into a socket to start operation of the radio set. No change in present day receivers would be called for. Thus the use of radio is being constantly made more convenient for the public.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

From the Times-Gazette of August 5, 1909

George W. Lovie, W. C. Havey, F. M. Granger, George West, A. Sahlgren and J. Hansen are attending the great council of Red Men in San Francisco this week, being delegates from the Matamoros Tribe of this city.

August Bahler has bought the Redwood City bakery on Bridge street from Mr. Becker.

Work was started on the proposed tunnel through the mountains between San Mateo and Halfmoon Bay Wednesday. The proposition is to begin tunneling about half a mile from this side of Byrnes store and come out on the other side where the road debouches on the flat and on the left hand of the gulch. If this project is completed on that line it will reflect everlasting credit on the board of supervisors and will startle the State of California as an exhibition of enterprise never before attempted on the coast—to tunnel through a mountain for road purposes. Supervisor Coleman expresses his opinion that it will shorten the distance by about four miles.

Society had an inning last Thursday night at the home of Miss Cecilia Hynding, the event being the opening of the season after a return from camping. Those present assembled at about 9 o'clock and from that time on music and merriment reigned supreme. Many innovations in the way of games and conversation were noticeably, and the program showed a great deal of preparation. William Henry Vincent King, late of California, presided at the piano and played the latest airs in his new form, while John Kolben and Miss Dagmar Hynding showed how they about stakewalking might be done. The most surprising part of the evening's entertainment was the hypnotizing by Miss Mary Meering. Among those present were: Misses Cecilia Hynding, Doreen Hynding, Sallie Nelson, Fannie Crowe, Maud Beeson, May Cook, Mary Meering, Ella Gilly, Louise Mouri, Mattie Stelter, Nellie Scott, Laura Brettingham, Florence McNamara, Harriet Grey and Andy Hynding, Will Hogan, Harry Lowell, Harvey Ross, Dave Stafford, Carl Decker, Will King, Cliff Bacon, George Poole, John Nelson, and Roy Cloud of Redwood City, James Lynch and Miss Bertha Kuck of Menlo Park, F. Wills of Stanford, D. Danneberg of Palo Alto, P. McEllean of Berkeley, Miss Ginnac and Mr. McIntyre of San Francisco.

Clarence Chote has been promoted from the yard to clerkship in the office of Tacoma Mill Company. This is a deserved recognition to a deserving young man. Mr. Chote has been in the company's employ for four years.

Our millinaire miller and farmer, C. R. Spivato, wears a broad smile as do Messrs. Yount and Rowell and others, who have acreage down to hay, since the delightful rain has come among us. In fact everybody is happy. The era of good times is here and henceforth we predict a bright future for our country.

There is a hum of activity about the Tacoma Lumber Company's yards these days. Business is brisk and the company is rushed with orders. The following schooners discharged large cargoes this week: Natalie, Emile Lundt, Adella Griffin, Miami, Anne E. and Fairfield. The large warehouse of the company has been thoroughly cleaned preparatory to receiving the large crop of grain in the county this year. It is possible that the big building will be taxed to its fullest capacity, as there is more demand for space than for years past.

REDWOOD CITY AFTER 20 YEARS

Brother Benjamin and his big free how are attracting enormous crowds in Redwood City every night at the show grounds back of the court house. He and his co-worker, Mr. J. Sagan, are able to attract a large audience, while the show they carry is exceptionally clever and brings delighted comments from all those who attend.

Brother Benjamin was here 20 years ago and gave his concert then on the back now occupied by the Sequoia Hotel. He is more than pleased with the progress shown by Redwood City and impressed with its great future. He says, "You have a hustling set of citizens here with your Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis Club and other organizations and you deserve all the praise that can be showered on you for the state you have made since I was here." What with the Dumbarton bridge, your manufacturing in-

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT ROY W. CLOUD WRITES ON CANADIAN TRIP

County Superintendent of Schools of John Hancock's father, who was pastor of the Lexington Congregational church at the outbreak of the Revolution. On the night of the 17th of June, 1775, John Hancock took his ride. John Hancock and Sam Adams were visiting Hancock's father; Revere rode to the house and gave the warning to Hancock and Adams. Hancock went back to Boston while Adams accompanied Revere on the ride to Concord.

At Concord we visited Louise M. Alcott's old home and saw the places that inspired "Little Women," "Little Men," "The Old Fashioned Girl" etc. Then we stopped at Emerson's home and also the little church where the First Continental Congress was held. We visited the Old Manse into which Hawthorne took his bride in the days of long ago, and where he wrote "Mosses from an Old Manse," and so many of his other wonderful stories. Then came the bridge, where the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard around the world.

Then we went to the Sleepy Hollow cemetery and saw the simple monuments of these wonderful writers who gave America a place in the world of letters. On our way back to Boston we went through Walpole, where Thoreau and his little band of literati had labored nearly a hundred years ago. We stopped at Auburn cemetery and stood for a moment by the beautiful monument of Mary Baker Eddy and then by the simpler slabs that told the resting places of Longfellow, Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Edward Everett Hale. We stopped by the home of the "Village Blacksmith" and later by the side of the spot where Warren fell at Bunker Hill and we felt that our visit to Boston was well worth while.

At Montreal we visited every place of interest. It is a city of churches, church schools and universities. From Mount Royal we had a wonderful view of all the country round about. Montreal is a big city, but its largeness does not impress one because it covers so much territory.

We spent two days at Toronto and enjoyed every minute of the time. We visited the Parliament house and Toronto University and saw many things of interest. Then we went to Niagara Falls. The immensity of the Falls is awe-inspiring. We viewed them from each side. It is truly one of nature's marvels and the falls and the rapids above as they roll and tumble and fall are sights which can never be forgotten.

From Niagara we went to Sarnia on Lake Huron and began a three-day journey by steamer across St. Clair river, Lake Huron, Soo Sault, St. Marie and Lake Superior to Duluth. The journey over the shining "Big Sea Waters" was truly inspiring and the time spent was really too short when Sunday morning brought us to our journey's end. While enroute we stopped at Port Arthur, the land of the Obilways where Hiawatha took his Minchewa and where the Old Man of the Mountains is still to be seen enjoying his long sleep. Port Arthur is now the site of the greatest grain elevators in the world and we had the good fortune to be guided through the largest elevator by the chief grain weigher of the Dominion of Canada. He explained things to us thoroughly and our trip was a big piece of education in itself.

On Sunday we began our journey towards Western Canada. The trip through Northern Minnesota was uninteresting because of the sameness of the country through which we traveled. The cities we passed looked prosperous and we had a long enough stop at Winnipeg to go to town and visit the Parliament house and the university, which were beautiful and interesting. The country was not so prosperous, however, and Western Canada is suffering from a lack of rain and conditions will probably be bad this year.

This morning we awoke in the Canadian Rockies. I cannot even try to describe them they are so mighty

REAL ESTATE MAN ON PENINSULA

H. H. Brotherton, a salesman for Los Angeles real estate dealers, has been in looking for the section in which he lives. Last Saturday a San Francisco Call contained a communication from the local realtor, relative to the chances and possibilities of this district. Brotherton's letter, which was in answer to one appearing previously, read as follows:

Real Estate Editor, The Call—A writer on a San Francisco paper signing himself, "The Observer," calls attention to the great need of many bridges across the bay and goes on to say:

"Every holiday that comes at or near a weekend serves to again emphasize this important fact. This week, for instance, the flood of motorists at the Oakland and Sausalito ferries started Thursday afternoon and a long waiting line testified to the eagerness of the public to get out of the city."

"Thousands of people were delayed and caused needless annoyance simply because they had to wait for ferries instead of having the accommodation of bridges."

"These same thousands will be waiting on the other side of the bay until a late or an early hour today in the equally futile attempt to get home."

What "The Observer" and thousands of San Francisco people have failed to observe is that it is not necessary to cross the bay in order to enjoy a day's picnic or a weekend or vacation outing in the redwoods. A charming country of redwoods, streams and mountains is available right at the door of San Francisco on the coast side of San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties, where the climate is cool and invigorating and can be reached by the motorists in less time than he spends waiting for a boat to cross the bay.

The thousands of motorists who wait in line at the ferries for two to three hours on Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning should be informed that "hindsight is better than foresight," and if they would turn around and travel south for two hours instead of waiting that long for a boat, they would find themselves in the canyons of the Pescadero, the Butano, the Waddell, or in the Big Basin, and the wonderful country of the Big Sur. Half-moon Bay has one of the finest beaches anywhere on our coast line and Pebble Beach at Pescadero is also a famous point of interest.

In the days preceding the advent of the motor car the redwoods of Marin and Sonoma counties were the only places that could be reached by railroad, and consequently the many vacation resorts and summer camps were established in the Russian River and nearby territory. We are creatures of habit and the public still looks upon that district as the only available vacation ground and waits hours to get on a ferryboat, with the resulting talk of the necessity of bridges, etc.

Some day the people of San Francisco will discover the wonderful territory on the coast side of San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties, which is so easily reached in such a short time. It has already been discovered by many, as evidenced by the recent purchase by San Mateo county of a 300-acre virgin redwood grove on Pescadero creek, which has been dedicated as a memorial park and turned over to the American Legion of San Mateo county as a park commission. This beautiful property, with the Pescadero creek running through it for more than a mile, will be maintained by the county as a public park.

The beauty of this park is not excelled by the famous Bohemian Grove of Sonoma county, and there are more than 12,000 acres of virgin reduced timber in the immediate vicinity.

With this wonderful playground practically adjacent to San Francisco there should be no need for the motorist to wait two or three

Two Miles Was "Long Distance" 48 Years Ago Now Telephone Circuits Stretch 5,500 Miles

BY JOHN D. O'BRIEN

Two miles in 1876, 5,500 miles today—all the way, in fact, from Havana, Cuba, to Catalina Island off the coast of Southern California—is the record in the remarkable development of toll telephone service in this country. The range in conversation has gradually extended until now it is possible to telephone between any two states in the Union.

The first conversation by overhead lines occurred on October 9, 1876. It was between Boston and Cambridge, a distance of two miles. The experiment was a complete success and was followed on October 26, 1876, by what may be termed the first long distance conversation in the world. Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, talked from Salem, Mass., over a wire with his assistant, Thomas A. Watson, in Boston, 19 miles away. This was the first public demonstration of the telephone and it served to bring home to the people of the nation that there was now a new word in the language, a new idea in the scientific world.

After this, developments were rapid. By 1880 a line had been constructed between Boston and Providence, a distance of 45 miles, and this was followed by the opening on March 27, 1884, of the overhead line from Boston to New York, 235 miles.

With the opening of the New York-Boston line, long distance telephony began to be a real factor in the nation. At last it was realized that the telephone had become more than a neighborhood affair. It was an epoch-making event in the history of long distance lines.

From that time on the development was steady and certain. The 900 mile goal was reached on October 18, 1885, when the New York-Chicago line was opened. By the early years in the present century the line had been extended to Omaha, and on May 8, 1901, New York and Denver were connected by telephone. The range of conversation was then 2,100 miles, but the telephone engineers were not satisfied. For years they had been looking forward to the time when a transcontinental line could be established, and within four years of the opening of the line to Denver, their dreams came true.

In 1913 the overhead line between New York and Salt Lake City, 2,600 miles, was opened, and on January 25, 1915, the Atlantic Coast talked to the Pacific when Boston and San Francisco were connected by wire. It had taken 40 years of pioneering effort to make it possible to talk between these points, 3,650 miles away, but it was an event that served to justify the most sanguine hopes of Alexander Graham Bell and the friends who never lost confidence in him when the telephone was but a feeble, little toy, able to articulate only a few, unintelligible sounds.

Next came the extension of the line to Los Angeles, followed on April 11, 1921, by the first conversation between Havana, Cuba, and Catalina Island, via submarine cable, radio and underground lines and radio telephone—distance, 3,500 miles.

Each step in advance in this noteworthy development of the transmission of speech was marked by important discoveries and inventions which tended to perfect the quality of the transmission and the distance over which the telephone currents could be carried. Among these developments have been many improvements in the telephone instruments, in the switchboards and other central office equipment, in cables and line apparatus such as loading coils, the carrier multiplex telephone and telegraph system and phonograph circuits, so that long distance lines, in addition to extending much greater distances, may now carry several messages at once.

One of the latest and most fundamental inventions, however, in extending the range of transmission and in improving its quality, is the vacuum tube repeater which is one of the great marvels of science. This is a device which receives weak telephone currents, amplifies and enlarges them, and sends them on with renewed strength to the end of the line. In adapting the vacuum tube for use on telephone wire circuits and in radio telephone, some remarkable developments have been achieved in the laboratories of the Bell System.

The vacuum tube repeaters were first used in the transcontinental line running between New York and San Francisco. Their success was immediate—so much so in fact, that their use has gradually been extended and they are no longer considered simply a device for very long distance circuits.

Twelve repeaters, spaced at intervals of about 250 miles, are used in a New York-San Francisco telephone connection. All told, there are now over 4,000 repeaters in the country.

The new art which has made long distance conversation sound as if the other party were "talking from a telephone just across the street," has been built up with the vacuum tube as one of its fundamentally important parts.

SITE OF NEW BLOCK HAS HISTORIC VALUE

High lights on the history of city in Francisco were brought into play with excavation work near the proposed site of the new Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. Just as the establishment of the pioneer theater by W. C. Ralston, in 1869, marked the beginning of drama in that city, the starting of work on the new telephone company building marks a point in San Francisco's growth which places her at the head of world metropolitan cities in respect to telephone development, with an average of one telephone for every three to four persons of population. The new telephone building, one of the largest in the world, will be built of brick with terra-cotta trimming. The structure will have a frontage of 137 1/2 feet and a depth of 173 feet.

The site on which the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company's business office building is to be located is rich in associations with the early days of San Francisco, for there W. C. Ralston built the old California theatre, at a cost of $125,000 in 1869. Ralston, one of the richest men of the times, founded the Palace hotel and the Bank of California, and maintained many palatial mansions, one, in particular, at Belmont, to which he transported his guests by relays of carriages in almost railroad time. The California remained the most commodious theater in this city until the building of Wade's Opera House, in the 70's. The financier spared no expense in procuring actors for productions in this city's first home of the legitimate drama, and brought the company for "Money," the play with which the theater was opened, from the east by special train for the occasion, a procedure which caused much wonder, even in those days of flowing gold.

John McCullough and Lawrence Barrett were actor-managers of the old California Theatre, later succeeded by Barton Lane, who guided its affairs for many years. The pioneer playhouses, of which for which Bush street was famous, was the scene of many historic triumphs, such as "Julius Caesar," which brought in receipts of $20,000 in four weeks. "Gold Silver," a local drama written by a San Francisco, "The House of Julia Caesar," played in 1869, of which Edwin Booth and Kate Castleton were principals. The theater was succeeded by the new California theater and has stood until the earthquake of 1906.

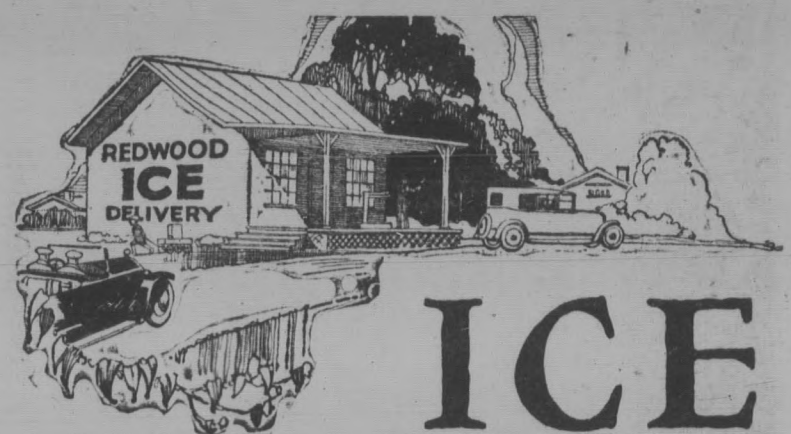

Bush street, in addition to having been the theatre center of old San Francisco, has been associated with telephone history in two ways. The founding of the city's first large exchange having been located at 216 Bush street, part of the old Brooklyn hotel. One of the largest telephone exchanges in San Francisco is located at 415 Bush street, while the Graystone building, at the corner of the latter thoroughfare and Larkin street, is rapidly nearing completion.

PAY TELEPHONES ROBBED IN FOUR PENINSULA CITIES

Snack thieves last Sunday night robbed the telephone boxes in the pay telephones in the stations at Burlingame, San Mateo, Redwood City and Palo Alto. According to the telephone company, the loss of money was not large, as the boxes had been emptied a short time previous. In some cases, however, the boxes had been ripped from the wall and taken away. One of the boxes was found in San Mateo, broken open and the money removed. Another was found in the station at Redwood City.

The same methods were used by thieves about two years ago, when the same towns were visited and considerable sums taken from the boxes. On that occasion the stolen telephone was taken from the booth on the occasion, a procedure which

S. F. SCOTTS PLAN SPANISH PAGEANT

More than 12,000 Scots and Master Masons from throughout California are expected to gather in San Francisco August 23 for a ceremonial and Spanish pageant to be presented under the direction of San Francisco Pyramid No. 1, Ancient Egyptian Order of Scots.

Under plans announced by Toparch Johnson S. B. Smith, the affair will start with a huge street parade in which the Libyan Guard, Band, Neophytes, Minstrel Troupe and Oriental Band of the local pyramid, augmented by the uniformed bodies of other pyramids of the state, will march.

The pageant, depicting the early Spanish period of California's history, will then be staged under the direction of Paq Pharaoh Waldo F. Postel. The ceremonial will follow the pageant and nearly 1,000 candidates will be initiated.

Dick Glesman, Chief of the Mo, will direct the ceremonial, while Clarence M. Freed is chairman of the special campaign committee.

The janitor at our place says he gets his recreation in the evening by watching his wife mow the lawn.
